NEW FIRM

Beny & Son Will Establish Business in Vulcan

A business announcement of importance to the people of the Vulcan district is made in this issue of the Advocate. It is that Beny and Son of Medicine Hat and Irwin have decided to locate a branch of their old established business in Vulcan.

They will handle Willys-Overland and Willys-Knight cars in this district and Charles Beny, the "son" of the firm is moving to Vulcan this week to manage this branch.

They have opened temporary quarters on Main street and will be ready for business this week. They are looking for a site for the erection of a new big garage here but in the meantime will make arrangements for servicing their cars from one of the local garages. They will carry a complete line of parts and accessories in addition to their line of automobiles.

Carl Beny, the senior member of the firm is one of the pioneer merchants of Alberta. He opened his first store in Alberta at Irwin more than twenty years ago. Last year opened a branch at Medicine Hat and this further expansion is the latest step in a remarkably successful business career.

"In selecting Willys-Overland and Willys-Knight automobiles for selling I know that I am offering the best dollar for dollar value in the automobile world today. These cars with their all-steel construction, baked enamel finish, powerful engine and wonderful economy are recognized more and more as the most useful and dependable car on the market," said Mr. Beny in an interview with the Advocate. "I would like you to ask the people of this district who are thinking of getting a car this fall or next spring to carefully inspect the line which we have to offer and arrange for a demonstration."

J. A. LINDSAY

Vulcan Mourns the Passing of Pioneer Resident

Sunday was made sad by the announcement of the death of Mr. J. A. Lindsay, which had taken place in the early morning of that day following an illness which had taken him from his daily avocation on the Friday previous.

In the passing of J. A. Lindsay, Vulcan loses one of the earliest pioneers of the town. Coming here when Vulcan was only a name, he established a hardware business in the building now occupied by J. Wolfe. Later owing to ill health he retired with Mrs. Lindsay to the property west of town which they have since made their home, latterly establishing a smaller hardware business in the Naismith block.

Mr. Lindsay was more than a pioneer. He was a gentleman of culture and refinement, whose influence, extended in his quiet way, has always stood for the best in community life. He sought always to keep himself in the background and succeeded so well that while he was respected by all he was known only by a few. He resented any publicity for himself, always seeking to pass the honors on to someone else.

In spite of his reticence he was always accomplishing some step towards the betterment of humanity. Generous to an unusual degree, there are many whose loads have been made lighter by the kindly ministrations of his friendly hand.

School children, whose honest efforts merited praise, are the owners of volumes of classics, which along with the helpful and encouraging letters which always accompanied the book, will be kept as cherished memories of a revered and departed friend.

Those who have appeared before Mr. Lindsay in the courts of justice will testify to his studied judgment and while justice always came first, it was meted out with wise tolerance and mercy.

His life with its unusually broad experiences had developed in him an extraordinary understanding of humanity and its problems. Keen of intellect, and tender-hearted as a little child, his advice and sympathy were invaluable to the many, who sought him in time of need.

Mr. Lindsay was born in Scotland, coming to Canada when quite a young man. He located in Mt. Forest, Ontario and later came west to Calgary in the very early days of that city, being at that time connected with the firm of J. H. Ashdown and Co. and later with the same firm was located in Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie. In 1911 he came to Vulcan where he has since resided.

Besides his wife he leaves two daughters, Mrs. L. W. Sale of Calgary, who is at present in Baltimore, and Mrs. J. T. Oliver of Oakland, California, and one son, Gordon, of Regina, Saskatchewan.

The Saskatchewan wheat crop has been damaged somewhat by frost.

Master Albert Collier fell off the swing at the school yard on Thursday last and broke his arm, and is now going about with it in a sling. These things are all in a boy's life, and before long the mishap will be forgotten. In the meantime the lad is having all the fun he can under the circumstances.

The annual provincial seed fair in Alberta, is to be held early in the new year at Calgary. For the past two years it has been held in Edmonton. Those seed producers in the province who contemplate exhibiting should apply to the Field Crops Branch, Department of Agriculture, at Edmonton for catalogue and entry forms.

Mrs. Wm. McPherson has sold her farm to Mr. A. M. Herman. We are not informed as to the price, but understand that it was a good figure. The farm is a good property, not far from town, and is in a splendid state of cultivation. The former owner will dispose of her stock and chattels by public auction at date yet to be determined.

The man who will not lend his brains, his energy and some of his money to the efforts of his fellow citizens, or who will not heed suggestions which he in his own mind, knows are for the welfare of his town, is not a useful member of society. No man has a right to absorb all that a town can give him and refuse to contribute towards community benefit. To do so is to become a community parasite; so says an exchange.

Mr. H. M. Sorenson, who has a farm out Reid Hill way, and resides in the States, has been here some days looking after his interests. He came in and had his name added to the list of subscribers to The Advocate, the journal which broadens weekly the doings and conditions of the district, and to the men who live in distant lands it is interesting to know when it rains and when it snows, as well as to learn of the big crops and of the activities of the people.

Miss Charlotte Carlson, well known in Vulcan and vicinity, was the victim of an auto accident at Everett, Washington, a week or more ago. The young lady, who was eighteen years of age was instantly killed. Deceased was a cousin of Mrs. Wm. Peterson, with whom she resided for some time. The parents and family were for some time residents of Clatsop, but are now located at Everett. Friends of the deceased, and they are many, deeply regret this sad occurrence, which so suddenly terminated the life of a bright and estimable girl.

The business, stock and premises of the Club billiard hall and barber shop has been purchased from Mr. J. A. Russell by Mr. William Wallace, and this constitutes one of the big business deals of local interest of the past month. The new owner has been in possession and has been operating more than a week. Mr. Wallace has had experience in the business and as a barber has exceptional ability. He contemplates some changes in the premises for their improvement and the better service for patrons. The new man looks good, and the hope is that the new order of things will be of profit to him and to Vulcan.

There is a demand for houses in Vulcan that far exceeds the supply. It is a good sign, but it might be bad business to lose good residents for the lack of residences. If you have a house to rent or sell, say so in The Advocate.

The opera house management announces a dance on Thursday night, October 2nd, and the return of the "Jolly Boys" orchestra. This is an event that will command the interest of the dancers, for good music is in assurance of a good time.

The man who sells mill machinery was in town again this week, and from what he said there is still a prospect of promoting the establishment of a flour mill in Vulcan. A mill of the kind in this town has been viewed by many as a good proposition.

The ladies of St. Aldhelm's Church have arranged for a dramatic recital on Thursday, October 2nd, to be given by Miss Winnifred Gilhooly and assisting artists. Miss Gilhooly, who is now on the school staff, is an artist in elocution, not unknown but still unheard in this art in Vulcan, will surely be well received on this her first appearance in this town.

It was certainly splendid news that Secretary Nelson received on Monday that his efforts to secure somewhat of an innovation and exceptional feature in connection with the school fair had been successful, and this was that Mr. Colin Groff, government publicity commissioner, would officially attend the fair and superintend the taking of moving pictures of the features of the fair. This is a real delight to the boys and girls, and the bigger folks are not without interest in the prospect of being in the movies.

Mr. Fred Elves and family have shipped their household goods to Vancouver, and on Wednesday packed up sufficient for their requirements on the way to the coast. We understand that their residence at Vancouver will be temporary, perhaps for a year, and the change is made for the health and pleasure of the family. Many friends here hope that they may realize to the fullest the benefits they seek. In the meantime Vulcan will miss them in the activities of the town. Mr. Elves being a member of the council and other local organizations.

Every business man has his worry, but the misfortune of the Vulcan Light and Power company came close to giving everybody trouble. Some thrasher on the move with his outfit ran into the guy wire from the smoke stack on the power plant, and this buckled and broke the stack, but it remained standing. If it had fallen the results can only be conjectured, but it is sure that we would have been without light at least for a time. The equipment is such at the plant, however, that while the staff labor on repairs light patrons enjoy service undisturbed.

Mr. Jack Thompson, who is now down near Boston, and was once a resident in Vulcan and is coming back, sends to friends here a score or more of interesting photos of big league ball games taken by himself when at these games, and he has this season witnessed every team in the American and National leagues at play. The pictures are really good, and in them appear Babe Ruth and the other celebrities, and the local ball fans enthusiastically picking them out in the pictures. Jack signals his intentions of returning by sending word to put him down as a member of the curling club for next winter.

The announcement comes from Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dunham of the marriage of their daughter, Addie, to Mr. Theodore L. Mutz, on Wednesday, September 17th at Abbotsford, British Columbia. Mr. and Mrs. Mutz, will be at home on Forty-ninth street, Portland, Oregon. The principals in this happy and interesting event spent many days of their youth in Vulcan, where they were well known and popular, and many friends join in the good wishes and congratulations, among them The Advocate. They are of the kind of citizens Vulcan regrets not to have, but their success and happiness anywhere will be a pleasure to friends at Vulcan.

It may not be too late to again suggest that all flags should be flying in town on Saturday the day of the school fair.

Flags were at half mast on the public buildings in town on Monday, a mark of respect to the late J. A. Lindsay, an esteemed citizen and public official, and the schools and places of business closed during the funeral hours.

Will all those who kindly promised the different members of the Ladies' Aid of the Union Church a "penny a day" for July, August and September, kindly turn in same to the Aid as the ladies are in need of this money on their building fund for the new Sunday school room.

The next regular meeting of the Vulcan Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. William Smith, on October 3rd. The feature of the program will be a paper on "The care and preservation of the teeth," by Dr. H. P. Barker. An invitation to attend is extended to every lady.

The splendid brick store building and premises, in which he has been doing business for some time, has been purchased by D. B. Lockhart, from Mr. George Eamor. The building is a substantial one, and the location good, and the price paid was in accord with the general excellence of the property. This is one of the important business deals of the week.

An invitation was recently extended to Hon. R. B. Bennett to visit Vulcan and deliver an address on the subject of his visit to the Empire Exposition at Wembley, under the auspices of and for the benefit of the school fair. Owing to business engagements it was impossible of acceptance at present, but there is a prospect that we may yet have the pleasure and privilege of hearing Mr. Bennett on this very interesting topic.

The car load of fruit and vegetables, brought in by the Vulcan Co-operative sold well and rapidly, and there is now only a few apples left and these may be had at a bargain price. In this connection The Advocate man has to thank Manager Dawson for the gift of a splendid watermelon, and though we are not of the color of the folks who are famous for their taste for this particular kind of fruit, we doubt if any of them like melon any better.

The Saturday night dance at the Odd Fellow's hall was indeed a jolly and successful event, the music by the London Life orchestra keeping the dancers right up on their toes to the limit of midnight. It was the first appearance of the London Life boys at a dance in Vulcan, and comment is not necessary when it is announced that the Odd Fellows have again made an engagement with them for another dance, to be held on Saturday night, October 4th.

Proud of the bill printed for the School fair, The Advocate submitted a sample to the John Martin Paper Company, of Winnipeg and Calgary, and the following is what this big firm of wholesalers say of it. "We want to congratulate you very much on the appearance of the poster which reached our desk this morning. It is very nice and is the first sample we have had on the new color of stock. We are going to keep this sample before us to show other printers, just how the poster looks."

One of the men on Mr. O. L. McPherson's threshing crew suffered a rather painful injury the other day. He was unhitching a team of horses and by the animals was crowded along the wagon tongue in such a manner that a splinter off same was forced into his leg. It was of such size and penetrated to such a depth that it could not be easily removed, and a doctor with proper instruments were required for the operation. No permanent injury is anticipated, but it surely hurt the fellow for a time. Threshing accidents have been numerous this season.

Mr. Anton Spankie intimated to the newspaper man on Saturday that he had beaten the grain delivery record of 202 bushels of wheat hauled by four-horse team to Vulcan the week previous, and mentioned in the last issue. Mr. Spankie, with his team of four horses, hauled in and delivered 214 bushels and 10 pounds of wheat. These are some loads for the number of horses, but now comes another local farmer who promises to eclipse even these records on Saturday, and if he comes along with a bigger load on that day he will surely get a place in the moving pictures of Vulcan that are to be taken in connection with the school fair under government direction.

OUR IMPRESSIONS

Being a Short Resume of Trip Across The Ocean

By Charles Clark

It was with a certain amount of regret we said "Goodbye Piccadilly, farewell Leicester Square" and after a delightful two hour run we arrived at Leamington, the centre of one of the most historic districts of England. We were told there that geographically we were in the very heart of England for at Leamington stands a tree which is said to be in the very centre of England. From Leamington, a pretty town possessing mineral springs of widely reputed medical powers, we motored four miles to Warwick, where is situated the famous Warwick Castle, built in the year 1300. The grounds are still kept in fine condition and the original stone wall surrounds the place. The castle, is well preserved and in some of the rooms are hangings, tapestries and decorations dating back many hundreds of years. A guide accompanied us and related the history of the entire place as we sauntered through. The splendour of the castle is exceptionally marked, and it must have had fortunes spent upon it after its earlier use as a fortress gave place to its use as a residence. The Earl of Warwick, to whom it belongs, has been unable to maintain the place in recent years owing high costs and heavy taxation and has leased the place to a wealthy American named Marsh, with the exception of the historic rooms, which are now open to the public to inspect. The rental paid by the occupant, plus the admission fees of the thousands of tourists who go there, are said to bring in a handsome revenue and we quite believe it to be so.

Shakespeare's birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon, a short distance away, was our next stopping place, and here the Editors were tendered a civic welcome and luncheon by the Mayor and Council, after which we proceeded to view the scenes in which Shakespeare spent his boyhood. The home in which Shakespeare's parents lived, and where the greatest poet the world has known, was born, is still to be seen in the village of Stratford-on-Avon. It is now preserved solely as a show-place. In it one can see the rooms in which the family lived, with a few pieces of the original furniture, and several ancient documents written by John Shakespeare, the poet's father, in his capacity as Mayor, bailiff, etc., for he held almost every office in the town at some time during his life. Then we saw the school, still in use, which Shakespeare attended, with the original rough rail beams in the roof and seats which and on which generations of boys have carved their initials. We also saw the place where tradition states, Shakespeare sat as a boy at school, during the years 1571-1578. Much of the school, which was rebuilt in 1427, is to-day as it was originally constructed. Next we went to the old village church, where one can see in the parish register the entry of the birth of Shakespeare, in 1564, and further on the entry of his burial there in 1616. We saw too, Shakespeare's tomb, with the slab of marble above it placed there over 300 years ago, also the grave of his wife, Anne Hathaway, and of other members of his family.

We made a pilgrimage also to the cottage where Anne Hathaway lived. It is preserved largely in its original state, and here also some of the original furniture used at the time that Shakespeare courted the daughter of the house are to be seen. Our visit in Stratford was made to the beautiful memorial theatre, where Shakespeare's plays are enacted in series for a week at a time during different periods of the year.

Nearby lies Kenilworth, immortalized in Sir Walter Scott's novel of that name, and to Kenilworth we motored to see the ruins of the famous Kenilworth Castle. This castle, which must have been magnificent in its day, was built in 1150 by King Henry II, and is a specimen of military architecture of the late Norman period. Even to-day, when it stands in ruins, one can imagine the height above the surrounding realize that it must have risen to an country. With its walls and ramparts it must have covered several acres in extent, and was composed of a series of towers or keeps. One can still see in the walls, evidence of the great fire-places that were provided in some of the rooms. Kenilworth Castle is to-day chiefly of interest because of its history, for has fallen into such ruin as to be only a shadow of what it once was. Such names as Henry II, Henry III, Edward III, Charles I, besides many people of lesser note, are connected with Kenilworth Castle in history. During recent years further excavation around the castle has brought to light tombs with inscriptions which are believed to be from 400 to 600 years old.

It began to appear that our provincial tour would be as interesting as the wonderful days spent in London, Paris and Brussels. The same warm hospitality was extended our party wherever we went. From Leamington we proceeded to Torquay, through Devonshire which has been described as the playground par excellence of England. I had heard men of Devon sing "Glorious Devon" and after travelling through that beautiful country, and meeting with the inhabitants, I then understood why they sang the songs of Devon with such enthusiasm. "Glorious Devon" is a fitting name for the County of Devon, and of all the places visited in provincial England, none compared with the scenery of the south coast of Devon. The harbor known as Torquay, is flanked east and west by high hills, which rise to great heights and jut out into the channel to give the city of Torquay a harbor of great depth and width sufficient to make it a suitable berth for the Atlantic Squadron of the British fleet, when occasion arises. The town is situated on the lower ground fronting the beach and on the slopes of the eastern hill, which rises abruptly from a mile along the lower part of the town, is very attractive and draws many bathers and holiday seekers, and upon the occasion of our visit the beach was crowded with pleasure seekers on the sand and in the surf. In the harbor was anchored the West Virginian, an American warship, and the Jack tars were enjoying a holiday and mingled freely with the inhabitants. Torquay is a winter and summer resort, and frequently has a quarter of a million tourists within its boundaries every year. For attractions there are golf courses, tennis courts, bowling greens, with flower lined walks laid out by city authorities. It is one of the most popular resorts of England and to me was more attractive than the winter resorts of California.

A motor trip from Torquay to Dartmouth at the head of the River Dart, revealed to Canadians the beauties of Devon. The winding country are not unlike the original trails of Alberta up long grades and down into deep valleys. On the highlands we had wonderful views of the moors of Devon, with its variegated colors of heather decorating the hills, and we passed through valley after valley with their hedge bordered fields of green, while here and there was a river winding its way along making a picture that could scarcely be surpassed for scenic beauty. The town of Dartmouth, on the Dart River, has the Royal Navy college stationed there. It was from there the Pilgrim Fathers originally set out in their quest of freedom beyond the seas, but as they sailed from Plymouth, the town which marks their landing place in New England, was given that name.

The Dart River winds about among the hills and plains of Devon, and there could be seen several hundred ships anchored, tied up since the war. Meanwhile the sea trade is recovering and the ships are being utilized. At one spot along the Dart, a house was pointed out, where Sir Walter Raleigh lived at one time and where he smoked tobacco taken over from New England. The sail on the Dart was one of great pleasure, until finally we landed at the village of Totnes, and from there we motored back to Torquay, passing through Paignton, where lives the founder of the Singer Sewing Machines.

Upon our return to Torquay, we saw that the Atlantic Squadron under command of Sir John de Robeck, had steamed into Torquay and thus we were granted the view of a great sight with eight vessels anchored at intervals all over the harbor. It was the same fleet which we had visited at Weymouth a week earlier, but on this occasion our party were privileged to accept the invitation to make a visit of inspection to the battleship Revenge which is under command of Captain Stevenson. Ever since the days of the Spanish Armada, when Sir Richard Grenville performed his heroic feat of the "perpetual day," the Revenge, a to-day is a battleship of about the same size as the Queen Elizabeth, flagship of the fleet. She carries a crew of nearly 1000 men, has eight 15-inch guns and boasts of having taken a glorious part in the battle of Jutland. On the Revenge, we were taken to the stoke-hold, where a crew of 80 stockers are required to keep the vessel at full steam constantly (for the emergency) to the high bridge from which the ship is directed and where in action the great guns are directed with the aid of range-finders and fired electrically. Without actually having seen a battleship, one can have little idea of its complexity of the organization of great floating power plant, generating its own electricity, with its own refrigerating plant and with hydraulic pressure in use for operating the guns. We were interested in noting the anti-aircraft guns, and all the equipment for locating the range of distant vessels. For the 15-inch guns can send a shell over 20 miles. The most interesting part of the inspection for us was the practical demonstration of the working of one of the big guns. There are eight gun turrets, four at the fore part and four "aft", to use the nautical term applied in explanation. One of these 15-inch guns was operated by the crew and every operation was demonstrated except the firing. Each turret can be turned so that the gun will point in any desired direction, and the great gun, weighing 97 tons, can be raised or lowered to any range. Each gun and turret, with all the accompanying machinery, weighs 800 tons. The speed with which the great one-ton shell is raised from below, rammed into the gun, and the four charges which, when exploded, speed the shell on its way, are similarly rammed in the breech closed, and the gun fired was marvelous. We were greatly impressed by the clean cut, strong physiques of the men of the navy, and one could easily realize that men of this calibre had assisted in making Britain mistress of the seas. At Torquay civic authorities were lavish in their entertainment, and ere we left we enjoyed civic luncheons, dinners, banquets, receptions and a dance.

From Torquay we went northwest to Exeter, capital of the west of England. Exeter has been a city since the time of the Roman occupation and to-day is the shopping centre of Devonshire and of parts of Cornwall, Dorset and Somerset. Here we were tendered a cordial civic reception by the Lord Mayor and council and later entertained at luncheon. Exeter is a beautiful and interesting city, the shopping district being worthy of especial mention. The cathedral, a wonderful edifice was first enclosed by a wall in 1286 A.D. and that wall is still in a good state of repair. The Guild hall is also a wonderful piece of ancient architecture which dates back from the 12th century. It was largely rebuilt in 1466 and the present interior dates from 1556 and the present interior from 1556. At Exeter we saw what is said to be one of the finest modern works of art in statuary in Britain. The statue is surmounted by a bronze figure of victory and has four bronze seated figures representing The Sailor, Soldier, Nurse and Prisoner of War. In almost every town are to be seen wonderful war memorials commemorating those who died in the Great War.

Bath was the next place of stop and here we found a treasure house of historic interest. The city itself is largely residential, with very few industrial plants, the population of 70,000 being made up of retired pensioners, people of means, and those engaged in commercial life in the city. Bath is noted chiefly for its hot mineral water which springs from the ground at a temperature of 120 degrees and which is used in various ways in a large sanitarium for the treatment of many ills to which man is heir. It is from these mineral baths that the town got its name, for 900 years ago the Romans during their occupation of Britain established baths at this place. We had the opportunity of seeing here the remains of their work, which in recent years have been unearthed and restored as nearly as possible to their original state. It was most interesting to see the series of seven large stone swimming baths or pools which have been uncovered, all laid out in stone, the floors being covered with heavy lead sheets, dating back to the first century. In the excavations that have been carried on, pillars, altars, statues, coins, etc., have been unearthed which establish beyond doubt a good deal of the history of the place, which was commenced in 54 A.D. We saw one stone carved with an inscription giving the date 84 A.D., and others of a few years later, all made by the Romans. The fragments unearthed have been pieced together to illustrate the kind of temples, baths, etc., which the Romans had here until 377 A.D., when the Saxons destroyed the baths. They were not unearthed again until the 19th century, but what has now come to light is so perfect in many ways as to make one almost feel, as he stands within the confines of these ancient surroundings, that he is back with the Romans in early Britain. Here, indeed, as nowhere else on our tour, have we seen ancient history.

A walk about the city revealed a host of historic spots. To Canadians none was more interesting than the old house where a tablet records the fact that there General Wolfe lived at the time that he was called to take charge of the British troops which eventually stormed and captured Quebec. In another place stand the Grand Pump Room Hotel, on the site where stood the hotel originally conducted by Moses Pickwick, the only character whom Charles Dickens used in his works without change of name. Further on still stands the "Humfrey's club" described by Dickens. In King's Circus are many interesting houses. At No. 27 Admiral Parry, the explorer lived. In No. 24 Gainsborough, the great painter, lived, and here he painted his famous "Blue Boy" which sold for £100,000. No. 22 was the house in which Edmund Burke courted Dr. Nugent's daughter. No. 14 is the house which Lord Clive bought and occupied on his return from India. In No. 13 David Livingstone, the great African missionary, lived for a time. Nos. 7 and 8 were designed for William Pitt, the Elder, the great Earl of Chatham who held many of his cabinet meetings there, and in the same house in later years the famous artist, Lord Leighton, was born. We saw too the house where Walter Savage Landor, friends of Charles Dickens, lived. Here Dickens, on a visit to Landor, wrote much of "The Old Curiosity Shop," and it is during that time that "Little Nell" came into his friendship, giving him the character of that name for his famous work. In Bath also Dickens, while visiting his sister, wrote much of "The Pickwick Papers," and here he also got the original for his well-known character of Quilp. The York House Vaults still stand—the inn where Weller was hostler, giving Dickens his Sam Weller. But space will not permit further enumeration of the wonderful things seen in this ancient place which contains a wealth of history. We were driven out some distance into the country to Norton St. Philip where we were permitted to enter the famous old George Inn, which has been licensed to sell beer, wine and liquor since 1397. Much of it stands as originally built, including the courtyard where "Bloody Jeffries" held his assizes and condemned people to death by the score. In this same inn the Duke of Monmouth slept the night before the battle of Sedgwick. The drive through the country roads gave us a fine view of Somerset, "where the cider apples grow," with its hills and dales much like Devon. At one point we saw four highways of transportation lying parallel—a railway, a canal, a river and a paved road. While at Bath the civic authorities with the provincial newspaper men were most hospitable and tendered us receptions and banquets, making our stay there one of great pleasure and enjoyment.

The tour through England was not spent entirely on feasting and sight-seeing. The Editors were given an opportunity to learn something of the industrial life of the old country. In London a half day was spent in seeing the port of London and viewing the enormous shipping that is being done there. A day was spent at Port Sunlight seeing the great Soap industries of Lord Leverhulme. From the historic city of Bath we travelled to Cardiff and Swansea, where we visited the Coal docks at the Great Western Railway. The export of coal from these two ports in Wales amounts to nearly thirteen million tons annually. At Swansea we were permitted to visit a number of the large industries in and around that city. A score or more of us went down a coal mine, which is rather hard on clothing. Another excursion was to the Mond Nickel works at Clydach, which draws its raw material from Sudbury, Ontario. Others went to a tinplate mill, the largest in the world and this proved a warm place where steel rolling is carried on. The basis of tinplate is sheet steel which is not generally known by the rank and file. It was said that many visitors confess their ignorance to this and in fact during the war officials of the British Admiralty were not wise to that fact. The principle of joint councils of men and employees has been carried out with great success in the tinplate industry. The men's representatives are kept closely in touch with the state of trade, and it is understood that wages will advance and decrease in step with the employers' profit. The result is industrial peace and satisfaction, and I was told that there has been no strike in the tinplate industry for more than twenty years, and that the tinplate employees were the first to accept a cut in wages after the war.

Cardiff has a population of 230,000 people, engaged chiefly in coal mining steel producing and shipping industries, so that the character of its people is to that extent different from those we met with in the Southern towns, however, we found them eagerly anxious to make friendships with us and extended warm-hearted hospitality. After viewing their industrial plants and their port a huge civic reception and dinner was accorded, at which the newspapermen and Lord Mayor and council co-operated in welcoming the Canadians. Cardiff made a favorable impression upon all; their industry, likewise their friendliness and their readiness to exchange views in matters of trade and commerce in order to gain a mutual benefit with Canada was commented upon. They appear anxious to have trade largely developed between Canada and Wales. Here we had an opportunity of seeing the remains of an old castle built by the Romans in the first century. It has been repaired to some extent and much rebuilding done and the site is one of great interest to the tourist.

VULCANOUR MERCHANTSLocal Business Men Meet and Hear
Addresses

A representative meeting of Retail Merchants of Vulcan was held on Thursday evening, September 18th, the occasion being marked by the visit of two officials of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada in the persons of Mr. James Kellas, Provincial Secretary of the organization; and Mr. George S. Hougham, Special Representative of the Dominion Board of the Association.

The meeting lasted several hours and went extensively into a variety of questions incidental to retail distribution. The services of Mr. Kellas were repeatedly requisitioned to answer questions relating to the provincial activities of the Association, with particular reference to legislation at Edmonton. Considerable discussion also took place with regard to the powers of Vulcan retailers to enact an early closing by-law under the Early Closing Act.

While there was some difference of opinion as to details, there seemed to be a pronounced sentiment in favor of some municipal regulation for the closing of Vulcan retail stores.

Introduced by Mr. Kellas, as a man who had travelled extensively and as a student of merchandising problems in Canada and the United States, Mr. Hougham delivered an address which was attentively listened to. Prefacing his remarks by stating that he made no claims to being a merchandising expert, the speaker entered a powerful plea for more extensive and efficient organization among retail merchants, not only in their own interests but for the better service of the public whose purchasing agent they were.

Outlining some of the major activities of the Association, particularly in the Legislation field, the speaker emphasized the point that all legislation is the expression of some person, or group of persons, ideas, and analyzing some of the experimental economic legislation which had been passed at Ottawa and elsewhere, Mr. Hougham remarked that much of it was significantly expressive of an interrogation mark in the public mind as to the efficiency of modern retail distribution. Continuing this theme the speaker stated with some emphasis that the reason that the public, whether in the cities or in the country, were in doubt as to the precise necessity for the retail merchant in the community was because the retailers themselves did not take the public sufficiently into their confidence. Just so long, said the speaker, as retail merchants permitted their customers to get their ideas as to the function of retail merchandising from sources that were not authentic, would they have the present more or less unsatisfactory misunderstanding between themselves and other sections of society.

Pointing out the progress that had been made by other economic groups in raising their standards of efficiency and incidentally elevating their standards of efficiency and incidentally elevating their standards of comfort and culture, Mr. Hougham declared that it was the outstanding function of the Retail Merchants Association to raise the standard of retail merchandising from an unscientific hodge-podge of insane price cutting to the dignity of a profession, and this necessitated tremendous educational effort both among retailers themselves and radiating from their organization to the public; continuing his argument for a representative, efficiently conducted organization, the visitor told his hearers that "until you learn to respect yourselves in an economic sense, you cannot expect the public to respect you."

Mr. Hougham cited numerous examples of what organization intelligently applied had done for groups of retailers in different parts of the country, and summarized his address by declaring that "there is no problem or retail distribution which retailers themselves cannot solve, provided first that they approach such a problem in the spirit of efficient public service as against merely selfish group privilege, and second that they are consistent in their association program which implied confidence in each other."

A number of questions were addressed to the speaker with regard to particular phases of merchandising and organization work. All of which were answered, the speaker concluding by pointing out that the very nature of the questions addressed to him were indicative of the necessity for the very type of collective activity which the machinery of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada was intended for.

Through the efforts of the Northern Alberta Game and Fish Protective League, two hundred adult black bass have been brought in from Ontario, a present from Premier Ferguson, and will be placed in Ministick Lake, in the Elk Island Park east of Edmonton. A special car for the fish was provided by the Canadian National Railways.

The Hutterite colony south of Raymond, according to a statement made by its leader recently in the press, has established a unique record in grain production. In the five years they have been in Southern Alberta, the colony have more wheat than in all the years of their operations in North Dakota, extending over two decades. In the five years the little colony near Raymond has produced 284,000 bushels of wheat.

For the first time since the western route via Vancouver became operative for Alberta wheat shipments, farmers are to receive this year a price based on the Vancouver basis, instead of the Fort William basis, which has been the basis of payment for years. The wheat pool officials have announced that the initial payment this season will be $1.00 bushel on the Vancouver basis, which means that the farmers will gain the advantage of the lesser freight charge.

Cream from southern Alberta farms has shown a marked improvement during the past three years, but there is still room for improvement says one government inspector. Farmers are losing thousands of dollars annually in the way they handle and ship their cream. Shipments should be made frequently so as to avoid cream getting stale for that means a loss of money. It is stated there is altogether too much of two and three grades being shipped and an endeavor should be made to only ship cream of the highest grade. An educational campaign on such topics as the selection of dairy cows, feed combinations, care and shipping of cream, grading, etc., is what is wanted and it is to be hoped our dairymen will study the matter and thus improve the quality of cream shipped.
